False Tears

Une larme, produite en 1856 par Rodolphe, l'amant de l'héroïne flaubertienne Madame Bovary, est versée sur une lettre de rupture, qui sera remise par messenger à la protagoniste. Cette « émoticône » d'un casanova du 19^{ème} siècle apparaît à ce moment précis où la vie de l'autre devient incommode et que l'expression d'une quelconque émotion devient impossible. « Il eût fallu quelques larmes là-dessus; mais, moi, je ne peux pas pleurer; ce n'est pas ma faute » pense-t-il. Alors, Rodolphe trempe son doigt dans le verre d'eau qu'il vient de se servir, et laisse tomber une grosse goutte d'eau sur la lettre, laquelle laisse une tache pâle sur l'encre. L'anecdote de cette fausse larme est le socle – la métaphore « à peine humide » – sur lequel Spooner s'appuie pour étudier la manière dont nos vies semblent aujourd'hui « sous-traitées » ou évaluées et quelle distance cela crée entre les gens. Les travaux présentés sur cet étage, réalisés entre 2015 et 2018, oscillent entre réalité et fiction. Cet ensemble évoque un « roman en cours d'écriture », qui cherche à révéler des décalages, là où le langage échoue, disparaît ou est altéré.

A tear engineered in 1856 by Rodolphe—the adulterous lover of Flaubert's Madame Bovary—is dripped onto a breakup letter and sent to the heroine via messenger. The casanova's 19th century emoticon arrives at a moment when the life of the other becomes inconvenient and emotion cannot be conjured from his own body. "There ought to have been some tears on this; but I can't cry; it isn't my fault" he says, but not to her. Then, having filled a drinking glass with water, Rodolphe dips his finger and lets a big drop fall onto the paper, leaving a pale stain on the ink. Taking the incident of the false tear as a lynch pin—a barely wet metaphor—Spooner considers how life is 'outsourced' or assessed in the present day, and what distances are thereby created between bodies. A number of works made between 2015-18 fluctuate between facts and fiction. Together they hint at a 'novel in progress' that mines the gaps where language fails, goes missing or erodes.
